In statistics, the Pearson correlation coefficient (PCC, pronounced / 'ptərsən /), also referred to as Pearson's r, the Pearson product-moment correlation coefficient (PPMCC), or the bivariate correlation, is a statistic that measures linear correlation between two variables X and Y. It has a value between +1 and −1.

Pearson correlation coefficient - Wikipedia
Pearson's chi-squared test is a statistical test applied to sets of categorical data to evaluate how likely it is that any observed difference between the sets arose by chance. It is the most widely used of many chi-squared tests – statistical procedures whose results are evaluated by reference to the chi-squared distribution. Its properties were first investigated by Karl Pearson in 1900. In contexts where it is important to improve a distinction between the test statistic and its ...
