Status Anxiety
 Status Anxiety is a 21st-century phenomenon which is a result of capitalism, democracy, and an ostensibly egalitarian society, and is prevalent in countries where an inequality in income is evident. Status Anxiety can be defined as the constant tension or fear of being perceived as "unsuccessful" by the society in materialistic terms.

De Botton's book, "Status Anxiety", is a modern day approach to what has become an obsession, "keeping up with the Jones". Moral confusion and materialism are two different sides of the same coin and we only learn to reorient ourselves as we mature.

Status Anxiety This is a book about an almost universal anxiety that rarely gets mentioned directly: an anxiety about what others think of us; about whether we're judged a success or a failure, a winner or a loser. This is a book about status anxiety.

Status Anxiety (2005) diagnoses a problem unique to modern Western societies: the fear of being perceived as unsuccessful. While our desire to climb to ever-higher rungs on the social ladder can inspire and motivate us, it can also lead to anxiety and depression.

It's the tenets of philosophy that have us stare emotions like anxiety in the face and check them against logic. Thus we can beat status anxiety by realizing that most people's thinking isn't clear or logical. In other words, you should listen to your head instead of trying to blindly follow everyone else.
