Living Trusts And Other Ways
A living trust could have some advantages for you over other ways to manage your estate. Here are the benefits: Saves time and money in the probate process – A living trust names a trustee who can immediately take care of your end-of-life affairs—like paying for funeral costs and distributing property to heirs—without having to wait on the probate judge.

What Is a Living Trust and How Does It Work? | DaveRamsey.com

Will trusts are mainly used by couples to split ownership of the family home if they own it as 'tenants in common'. Rather than leaving their share to each other, they each leave it to a trust, which comes into being on the death of the first partner. Until recently, will trusts were a common way of saving on inheritance tax (IHT). A couple potentially liable for IHT could split their estate into halves, both below the nil-rate band.

Will trusts and lifetime trusts - Which?

Lifetime Living Trusts are specifically designed to protect your assets for you during your lifetime. They give you the peace of mind that your estate can be passed on securely and intact to your spouse, your children and their bloodline, or other named beneficiaries, after your death. Don't put your loved ones in jeopardy any longer.
