The Australian

Copyright Act (1968) gives songwriters and composers, music publishers, record labels and recording artists the right to control how their music is used. So whenever music or a music video is played and/or performed live, made available online or copied, the business authorising that music use almost always requires a licence. A OneMusic licence covers the rights of the songwriter, composer, music publisher, recording artist and record label who made and own the piece of music.

Why do I need a licence? | OneMusic Australia

OneMusic Australia will simplify the way all organisations obtain a public performance licence to play music. If you need to obtain a public performance licence for activity that will commence after 1 July, you should go straight to OneMusic – you can reach the team on 1300 162 162 or by emailing hello@onemusic.com.au

PPCA - Linking Business to Music Makers - Licensing Home

APRA AMCOS boasts more than 108,000 songwriter, music publisher and composer members. On July 1, 2019 AMCOS and PPCA launched OneMusic Australia, a single public performance licensing system.

OneMusic Australia offers joint public performance licences so there is no longer any need for separate licence agreements and invoices from PPCA and APRA AMCOS. The new organisation allows music users to more seamlessly meet their copyright obligations for the public performance of musical works, sound recordings and music videos.
