Outdoor Overture Flute

In Copland's best,
 straightforward, simple and angular style of the time, the overture begins with a stentorian musical
 motif that would see much use. It is soon transformed into a formidable, cantabile
 solo for trumpet over a kind of string vamp--a signature of the piece. A more vigorous, rhythmic section ensues in a kind of march style that eventually dissipates and yields to a quiet, lyrical solo in the flute, then clarinet, and finally strings.

Literature

Overtone Flutes – Sonoran Sound. These overtone flutes come from a maker we know in Hungary. They are made from either elder, acacia, or plum. The elder wood provides the breathiest sound and the acacia and plum are both quite penetrating with less audible breath. We carry these in a variety of keys.
