Using technology to address global challenges 1 October 2020 A University research initiative that addresses challenges in developing countries formally becomes part of this Department today (1 October 2020).

Department of Computer Science and Technology

After the first study described above, and the introduction of the new paper-and-pencil MCAS test in Massachusetts, the ALL school required students to write more on paper and less on computer. (note 11) In another Massachusetts school system, the principal feared that students who write regularly on computer lose penmanship skills, which might lead to lower scores on the new state test.

The Gap between Testing and Technology in Schools

Computer technology is heavily connected to the medical field, education, entertainment, architecture and even in security, so the opportunity to ultimately use your computer studies to bring something good to people are vast.
