Equality Diversity And Human Rights

Managing diversity is defined as ‘valuing everyone as an individual’, recognising that a ‘one-size-fits-all’ approach to managing people does not achieve fairness and equality of opportunity, given that people have different needs, values and beliefs. Human rights are defined as ‘the basic rights and freedoms to which all humans are entitled’.

Equality and diversity are essential components of health and social care. Good equality and diversity practices make sure that the services provided to people are fair and accessible to everyone. They ensure that people are treated as equals, that people get the dignity and respect they deserve and that their differences are celebrated. Equality and diversity shouldn't be seen as bonus benefits to your health or social care setting but more as integral constituents.
