"The Half-Life of Planets is a poignant account of the friendship that forms when two lives unexpectedly collide, as told from the perspectives of two unlikely friends. Liana, a reputed kissing addict, and Hank, a marginalized teen with Asperger's syndrome, embark on a journey to accept themselves and each other on their own terms rather than allow themselves to be defined by others.

Planet Half-Life is a gaming website owned by IGN and its subsidiary GameSpy. Maintained by a voluntary team of contributors, the site is dedicated to providing news and information about Half-Life and Half-Life 2, related modifications and other Valve titles. It was founded by Kevin "Fragmaster" Bowen and was at one point the largest of an array of GameSpy-run gaming websites known as the Planet Network. Following GameSpy's closure, Planet Half-Life seems to have ceased updating.

Planet Half-Life - Wikipedia

THE HALF-LIFE OF PLANETS succeeds on both fronts. In many ways, the book is about two teens, Lianna and Hank, who meet, and really like each other. Their growing closeness throughout the book is sweet, and Lianna's reaction when she discovers Hank has Asperger's is touching and realistic.

THE HALF-LIFE OF PLANETS is also about family and loss, with Liana's hypochondriac dad and emotionally distant mother, and Hank's jumbled family and unaddressed grief. It is a book about a boy who loves music and a girl who loves science as much as it is about a failing self-image or a socially stunting disability.

On this planet, currently our sole example of a life-bearing world, the need for water is non-negotiable. So astronomers search the cosmos for similar environments. Around almost every "normal" star, including our sun, we can draw a band of potential habitability: the right distance and temperature for liquid water to exist.
