Like a spider's web connecting distant branches of a tree, the Navajo code talkers connect the movements of Marine troops, directing them and warning them of danger. Their Navajo language and voices support the "web" of the troops, resulting ultimately in the U.S. victory over the Japanese.

Code Talker Discussion Guide | Scholastic

Code Talker Overview Background Code talkers were Navajo Marines who used their native language to create a secret, unbreakable code. Native American languages are both complex and centralized within the United States, so they were perfect for secret codes in foreign wars. The United States primarily used the Navajo code during its fight
