Dynamic rheological properties were obtained at different temperatures (5, 10, 15, 20, 25, 30, and 40°C). All the honeys displayed Newtonian behavior. Complex viscosity and loss modulus can be predicted based on the chemical composition and temperature using polynomial models (R2 > 98.00%). Keywords: Honey, Rheology, Complex viscosity, Loss modulus.

Rheological Properties of Honey from Burkina Faso: Loss ...

Honey is a solution with high viscosity and most types of honey exhibit Newtonian behavior. However, some types show non-Newtonian features (thixotropy or dilatancy), which exerts influence on processing of the honey. The aim of this study was to evaluate the rheological properties of honey from Eucalyptus spp. The investigated samples of eucalypt honey originating from Italy or Australia were analyzed by the following methods: melissopalynological analysis, color on the Pfund scale ...

Thixotropic Behavior of Honey from Eucalyptus spp ...

An oscillatory test which is very much significant in rheology of honey has shown that viscous component predominates over elastic component.[23] Also some of the modern oscillatory measurements showed that crystallization of honey is dependent on botanical origin, temperature, and storage time.[24]

Prediction of Adulteration in Honey Using Rheological ...

The paper presents the results of rheological measurements conducted on three types of Polish honey: rape, multi-floral, and buckwheat honeys. The investigations involved identification of the properties of the honeys in both liquefied (by heating) as well as crystallised states. Both steady shear as well as dynamic rheological tests were performed.
