The acoustic frequencies used in sonar systems vary from very low to extremely high . The study of underwater sound is known as underwater acoustics or hydroacoustics. The first recorded use of the technique was by Leonardo da Vinci in 1490 who used a tube inserted into the water to detect vessels by ear.

Abstract. The topic of this chapter is underwater acoustics, with an emphasis on the aspects important to signal processing. The inherent assumption of distance in remote sensing applications implies the most important aspect of underwater acoustics is how propagation affects the signal of interest. Several topics related to acoustic propagation in the ocean are covered, including time- and frequency-domain characterizations of the wave equation, the propagation loss term in the sonar ...
