If you bought a television between the late 1960s and the 2000s it was probably a cathode ray tube (CRT) set. Each CRT set has a vacuum tube with electron guns that beam red, green and blue electrons onto a phosphor screen. The rays scan the dark screen, building up thousands of red green or blue dots to create picture.

TV Technology - ๐๐๐๐๐๐๐๐๐๐

The technical standards for modern television, both monochrome (black-and-white) and colour, were first established in the middle of the 20th century. Improvements have been made continuously since that time, and television technology changed considerably in the early 21st century. Much attention was focused on increasing the picture resolution (high-definition television [HDTV]) and on changing the dimensions of the television receiver to show wide-screen pictures.
