Prentice Hall Weather And Climate Answers

- A climate is the average, year-after-year weather conditions in an area. Two conditions are most important in describing a climate—temperature and precipitation.
- A climate region is a large area that has similar climate conditions throughout. For example, all of the southwestern United States has a hot, dry climate.

What Causes Climate? (pages 108-115)

Altitude is an important climate factor because air temperature decreases as altitude increases. Large bodies of water influence temperatures because water heats up and cools down more slowly than land. Marine climates have relatively warm winters and cool summers.
