We are the New York City regional blog of Urban Sketchers. The mission of Urban Sketchers is to raise the artistic, storytelling and educational value of location drawing, promoting its practice and connecting people around the world who draw on location where they live and travel. We aim to show the world, one drawing at a time.

New York City Urban Sketchers: Sketching Grand Central

The roaring twenties was the time when electricity became common in NYC. Automobiles were becoming a common site and shared the streets with horse drawn carts and carriages. Women wore short dresses and were called flappers, everyone smoked and everyone was crazy for Jazz. The Urban Sketchers of their day were part of the Ashcan School.
