For Pascal records (C structs), it is a little more complicated: `date_t = record date`

: integer; month : integer; year : integer; end; becomes. struct date_tag { int date; int month; int year; }; but it doesn't end there since the date_rec_tag is not actually a type in C. There is another step required to create a type for a structure in C. In Pascal, the identifier associated with a record ...
