An absolute value function has an expression within absolute value symbols. For example, all of the following are absolute value functions: $y = |x|$ $y = |x + 5|$ $y = |x - 10| + 9$; Some authors take the term “absolute value function” to mean just the first function ($y = |x|$). Others use it to mean all functions that include an absolute value expression. The differing terminology may stem from the fact that other functions (e.g. items 2 & 3) are just transformations (shifts and stretches ...
