Caesarean section (NICE clinical guideline 132) This guideline has been developed to help ensure consistent quality care for women who have had a caesarean section (CS) in the past and are now pregnant again or have a clinical indication for a CS or are considering a CS when there is no other indication.

Caesarean section (NICE clinical guideline 132)

the most common procedures performed in the United States, accounting for 32% of all deliveries. Postpartum surgical site infection (SSI), wound infection and endometritis is a major cause of prolonged hospital stay and poses a burden to the health care system.
