Dr Frances Consitt has written the history of the London Weavers' Company from the twelfth century to the close of the sixteenth century. The story begins in the reign of Henry I with a Pipe Roll entry dated 1130, which proves the existence of a gild of weavers in London before that date, and substantiates the Weavers' claim to be the oldest of all the London gilds.

London's Livery Companies are the direct descendants of the medieval guilds - religious fraternities which grew up round the City's churches in late Anglo Saxon times. After the Norman Conquest many of these began to develop into associations of workers in particular crafts or trades.

History | The Worshipful Company of Weavers

As an historic, textile-related, charitable and sociable organisation, the Company is well set to continue in fine style into the twenty first century and beyond. It is still a Guild steeped in tradition, but is fulfilling its role today in a thoroughly modern and practical way.
