introduction. Light is a transverse, electromagnetic wave that can be seen by the typical human. The wave nature of light was first illustrated through experiments on diffraction and interference. Like all electromagnetic waves, light can travel through a vacuum. The transverse nature of light can be demonstrated through polarization.

Light has the properties of a wave and a particle. The word "wavelength" is used to express the wave or undulating property of light. It is the distance that light travels in one oscillation, and is often expressed using a unit called "nanometer". One nanometer is equal to one billionth of a meter.

Video \(\{\text{PageIndex}{7}\}\): An overview of the wave nature of light. Light and other forms of electromagnetic radiation move through a vacuum with a constant speed, c , of $2.998 \times 10^8 \text{ m s}^{-1}$. This radiation shows wavelike behavior, which can be characterized by a frequency, ν , and a wavelength, λ , such that $c = \lambda\nu$. Light is an example of a travelling wave.

Light - Wikipedia
Sunlight is the main source of our natural light. It is created by a range of different wavelengths of light radiating from the Sun. By definition, visible light is the part of the electromagnetic (EM) spectrum to which the human eye is sensitive. The visible wavelengths only include light that we can see.
