When a certain temperature threshold unique to each substance in the universe is crossed, a phase change will result, changing the state of the matter. Under conditions of constant pressure temperature is the primary determinant of a substance's phase.

What Is the Effect of Temperature on States of Matter ...

During a change in state the heat energy is used to change the bonding between the molecules. In the case of melting, added energy is used to break the bonds between the molecules. In the case of freezing, energy is subtracted as the molecules bond to one another. These energy exchanges are not changes in kinetic energy.

Heat - Wikipedia

If solid matters gain enough heat they change state solid to liquid. Heat is a form of energy and in this situation it is used for the break the bonds of the atoms and molecules. Heated atoms and molecules vibrate more quickly and break their bonds. We call this process melting changing state solid to liquid.

Change of Phase/State (Phase Transition)

The important part of state changes is the amount of energy that must be added or taken out to change the state. The temperature of a phase change remains constant while the energy is exchanged. Only when all of the compound is in a particular state will a change in energy input change the temperature of the compound.
