The agent-structure problem in international relations theory Alexander E. Wendt Two theories, neorealism and world-system theory, strongly influence contemporary academic discourse about international relations. Both claim to provide "structural" explanations of how states behave in the international system.

The Agent-Structure Problem in International Relations Theory

In the social sciences there is a standing debate over the primacy of structure or agency in shaping human behaviour. Structure is the recurrent patterned arrangements which influence or limit the choices and opportunities available. Agency is the capacity of individuals to act independently and to make their own free choices. The structure versus agency debate may be understood as an issue of socialization against autonomy in determining whether an individual acts as a free agent or in a manner
