Cell Energy Cycle Gizmo Answers | www.voucherslug.co

The process through which cells convert organic molecules into energy is called “respiration”. This process occurs in every cell of every organism and is vital to its survival. Usually, respiration is described by the simple formula:

$$C_6H_{12}O_6 + 6O_2 = 6CO_2 + 6H_2O + \text{ENERGY}$$
 The formula tells us that the process uses oxygen to break down the glucose into carbon dioxide and water, while also creating energy.

The cell cycle is an orderly sequence of events. Cells on the path to cell division proceed through a series of precisely timed and carefully regulated stages. In eukaryotes, the cell cycle consists of a long preparatory period, called interphase. Interphase is divided into G 1, S, and G 2 phases. The mitotic phase begins with karyokinesis (mitosis), which consists of five stages: prophase, prometaphase, metaphase, anaphase, and telophase.

Answers about Energy

Cellular respiration is a set of metabolic reactions and processes that take place in the cells of organisms to convert chemical energy from oxygen molecules or nutrients into adenosine triphosphate, and then release waste products. The reactions involved in respiration are catabolic reactions, which break large molecules into smaller ones, releasing energy because weak high-energy bonds, in particular in molecular oxygen, are replaced by stronger bonds in the products. Respiration is one of the
