Hills Like White Elephants - Ernest Hemingway.pdf

Ernest Hemingway's "Hills Like White Elephants" tells the story of a man and woman drinking beer and anise liqueur while they wait at a train station in Spain. The man is attempting to convince the woman to get an abortion, but the woman is ambivalent about it. The story's tension comes from their terse, barbed dialogue.

Analysis of Hemingway's "Hills Like White Elephants"

The girl is staring at the distant hills, which are brightly lit in the sunlight, though otherwise barren in appearance. The girl makes a seemingly innocent remark to the man that the hills "look like white elephants," to which the man responds that he has never seen one. This comment leads to a brief bickering match over whether the man may or may not have seen a white elephant.

Hills Like White Elephants Summary & Analysis | LitCharts

"Hills like White Elephants" is a deceptively simple looking story: superficially Hemingway gives us a dialogue between a man and girl traveling so she can have an operation. Hemingway does not provide in depth description of the context for their conversation; however, he provides us with clues or hints of the drama lying just below their words.
