Bmw Steptronic Transmission Vs Manual

A BMW steptronic transmission is a BMW proprietary transmission that gives the driver the option to have automatic and manual functionality in the same transmission. The steptronic transmission has three different modes depending on the situation and driver preference. The steptronic transmission is an innovative piece of technology that has made it possible for BMW to bridge the gap between manual and automatic driving preferences.

Transmission? - A Better BMW

Sure, a manual gearbox offers more control under those conditions when you need it, but an automatic gives you the flexibility of letting the car decide the shift times when necessary—like during your morning commute. But with BMW's Steptronic automatic transmission, there's no need to choose. That's because this "manu-matic" gearbox offers the best of both worlds; a manual-shifting experience when you want it, and a multi-drive mode automatic when the situation calls for it.

BMW Steptronic Transmission—Best of Both Worlds | BMW Blog

Unlike the Tiptronic system, Steptronic does not allow you to switch to a completely manual control. The onboard computer is constantly monitoring the speed and can regain control of the transmission in certain cases, as follows: drive wheels are slipping; driving downhill without pressing the accelerator pedal; a sudden drop in engine speed;

Manual shifting system in automatic transmission (Steptronic). With the help of the Steptronic system, you can manually operate the automatic transmission. The driver's command is transmitted to the AGS AGU through three switches (per weight) in the manual channel. When the control lever is moved from the automatic channel to the manual channel, the "manual channel" switch is closed.
