PRE-LAB DISCUSSION: In the chemistry laboratory, it is sometimes necessary to experimentally determine the concentration of an acid solution or a base solution. A procedure for making this kind of determination is called an ACID-BASE TITRATION.

TITRATION OF ACIDS AND BASES PRE-LAB DISCUSSION

Acid-Base titrations are usually used to find the amount of a known acidic or basic substance through acid base reactions. The analyte (titrand) is the solution with an unknown molarity. The reagent (titrant) is the solution with a known molarity that will react with the analyte.

An acid-base titration is a procedure that can be conducted to determine the concentration of an unknown acid or base. In an acid-base titration, a certain amount of a titrant with a known concentration is added to completely neutralize the titrand— the unknown concentration, reaching the equivalence point.

pH Titration Lab Explained | SchoolWorkHelper

An acid-base titration is an experimental procedure used to determined the unknown concentration of an acid or base by precisely neutralizing it with an acid or base of known concentration. This lets us quantitatively analyze the concentration of the unknown solution. Acid-base titrations can also be used to quantify the purity of chemicals.

If your titration requires more than 1 buret full of titrant, be sure to record a final volume before the solution level passes the end of the scale and then refill the buret and start titrating again. If, for some reason, a direct titration procedure does not work well, there is a technique called "back titration" that may solve the problem.

ACID BASE TITRATION OBJECTIVES 1. To demonstrate the basic laboratory technique of titration 2. To learn to calculate molarity based on titrations INTRODUCTION Molarity (M) or molar concentration is a common unit for expressing the concentration of solutions.

ACID BASE TITRATION OBJECTIVES INTRODUCTION

So this would be MV is equal to MV , and let's do the molarity of the base times the volume of the base is equal to the molarity of the acid times the volume of the acid. So for our base, the concentration was 0.0154 molar, and the volume of base that we used was 27.4 milliliters in our titration. For the acid, we don't know what the molarity is.
