Moran was born in 1925, the son of a Yorkshire general practitioner. In 1950, he obtained his medical degree at the Middlesex Hospital Medical School in London, United Kingdom, and shortly after, began research in the Department of Physiology at the same institution. He used the new technique of electromyography, together with pressure and volume

EJ Moran Campbell - An appreciation

Edward James Moran Campbell was the son of a Yorkshire family physician. He obtained his medical degree at the Middlesex Hospital Medical School in London in 1950, and that year accepted an invitation to the newly created post of lecturer in physiological medicine at the hospital.
