It can also be a sign of a problematic fuel injector. Dirt and debris can build up on the tips of the fuel injectors. This can clog the very small holes that spray fuel into the combustion chamber. Such a problem has an easy fix, however. You can use fuel injector cleaners to help remove the debris that may have accumulated at the tips.

10 Symptoms of a Bad Fuel Pressure Regulator | Car Bibles

One major symptom of a bad spider injector is that your vehicle won't start, especially after sitting several days without running. If your fuel pressure is on target then it's not a bad fuel pump, and the spider injectors may be the culprit. Once you access the injectors you can see if you can clean them or if you need to replace them completely.
