 Learning, according to the authors, an anthropologist and a Computer Scientist, has a central characteristic. This is a process they call “legitimate peripheral participation.” As part of a group, learners participate in communities of practice.

BOOK REVIEW:

“Situated Learning: Legitimate Peripheral ...

Jean Lave and Etienne Wenger argue that learning is necessarily situated, a process of participation in communities of practice, and that newcomers join such communities via a process of ‘legitimate peripheral participation’—or learning by immersion in the new community and absorbing its modes of action and meaning as a part of the process of becoming a community member.

Jean Lave Situated Learning Theory - 12/2020

Their path-breaking analysis, first published in Situated Learning: Legitimate peripheral participation (1991) and later augmented in works by Jean Lave (1993) and Etienne Wenger (1999; 2002) set the scene for some significant innovations in practice within organizations and more recently within some schools (see Rogoff et al 2001).

Jean Lave, Etienne Wenger and communities of practice ...

The situated cognition focuses on the participation in communities of practice. Knowledge is located in the actions of persons and groups. Human knowledge and interaction cannot be divorced from the world. Learning process both in behavioral and cognitive psychology is individual one.

Community of practice - Wikipedia

Legitimate peripheral participation The path one takes as he/she moves toward expertise or mastery of reasoning, thinking, doing, valuing, believing and problem solving of a particular community of practice.

Situated Cognition Theories |

Psychology Flashcards | Quizlet

Situated learning is a theory that explains an individual's acquisition of professional skills and includes research on apprenticeship into how legitimate peripheral participation leads to membership in a community of practice. Situated learning "takes as its focus the relationship between learning and the social situation in which it occurs".
