I zipped through this book in about a day, it's a light, easy read. There were moments when reading this book (at my job, as a librarian) when I laughed out loud and had to put it down so I wouldn't seem unprofessional. It starts off with a bang, and hooks the reader right away, just like a good comedy routine, movie or story.

Who was the book written by? Whom was the book written by? In the examples above, the preposition by occurs at the end of the question. We interpret the word who/m as the Complement of this preposition, but the preposition is not at the beginning of the clause. For this reason both of the examples above are perfectly grammatical.

This is a book that isn't a book at all - except it is. Filled with wonderful illustrations like laptops, piano keys and scary dinosaur faces, it's a great book to create stories around. There are colourful creations such as clapping hands and toolboxes, as well as lots of pictures in black and white for smaller babies.
