An official game in baseball - also sometimes called a regulation game - is a game that has progressed beyond the point at which it could be considered complete, if subsequent events occurring in the prosecution of the game make such a determination necessary. This is approximately the halfway point of the game. In Major League Baseball playoff games are not complete until the trailing team has batted nine innings. This rule also applies for tiebreaker games for playoff positions.

In basketball, an official enforces the rules and maintains order in the game. The title of official also applies to the scorers and timekeepers, as well as other personnel that have an active task in maintaining the game. Basketball is regarded as among the most difficult sports to officiate due to the speed of play, complexity of rules, the case-specific interpretations of rules, and the instantaneous decision required. There is one lead referee and one or two umpires, depending on whether the
