A particular kind of lesson, which we call "instructional conversation" (Tharp & Gallimore, 1988, 1989, 1991), might help us redress the imbalance Goodlad and others have noted.

Instructional conversations, or ICs, are discussion-based lessons geared toward creating richly textured opportunities for students' conceptual and linguistic development.

Instructional conversation is a form of a discussion-based lesson that develops students' conceptual and linguistic skills through guided discourse where all students are held accountable for participation (Goldsmith, 2013). Students engage in scaffolded exchanges with their peers and the instructor to communicate their personal understandings and negotiate meaning of content on various levels.
