Module Detail - FOSS

The terrestrial plants used in the FOSS program are varieties that have been developed as food sources for humans and the animals humans raise: alfalfa (a legume), barley, corn, bean, pea, clover, radish, rye grass, wheat, oats, and sunflower. Students encounter them as seeds and grow them in a variety of environments.

Plants and Animals - FOSS

The animals in the modules were selected because they are abundant, safe for students, easy to care for, and hardy and well-adapted to classroom environments. FOSS selected organisms that were non-exotic, commonly available from local and regional suppliers, and, in some cases, found in the natural environments in many regions of the country.
