Anaerobic and aerobic digestion are naturally occurring processes that are harnessed to treat waste, produce biogas, provide heat and produce compost.

Aerobic and Anaerobic Biological Processes

The anaerobic digestion process is a natural process which takes place in the absence of oxygen. Organic material is digested by bacteria in a closed reactor vessel and biogas is produced. This controlled digestion process is normally accelerated by increasing the reactor temperature into the mesophilic range (normally between 30-37°C), or into the thermophilic range (normally between 55-65°C).

The Anaerobic Digestion Process - An Introduction

Anaerobic digestion is a process through which bacteria break down organic matter—such as manure—without oxygen. As the bacteria “work,” they generate biogas. The biogas that is generated is made mostly of methane, the primary component of natural gas.
