Queer London

In August 1934, young Cyril L. wrote to his friend Billy about all the exciting men he had met, the swinging nightclubs he had visited, and the vibrant new life he had forged for himself in the big city. He wrote, "I have only been queer since I came to London about two years ago, before then I knew nothing about it." London, for Cyril, meant boundless opportunities to explore his newfound ...

Queer London

The geography of queer London shrank throughout the period. In the 1920s it was surprisingly wide, with foci scattered all over the place. By the 1950s many of these (public lavatories included) had disappeared and queer London increasingly meant Soho and the West End, and private rather than public sexuality.
