The cogency of urban history as a framework for historical inquiry, however, remains powerful and it continues to evolve in new directions. As South Asia, China and parts of Africa undergo unprecedented urbanisation, the study of urban history is losing its Eurocentric focus and is instead taking on an increasingly global perspective.

The changing nature of urban history, by Richard Rodger ...

To write an urban history was an act of local piety and an expression of identity, but while local patriotism was an important consideration, there was also a widespread recognition that towns and cities were crucial agents of historical change. Towns, and the growth of a commercial economy, had undermined the feudal system of unfree labour.

Writing Urban History for the Twentieth-century City 575 In recent years, the study of urban history has focused increasingly on such cultural and political concerns, notably showing renewed interest in urban administration and municipal reform, or in the cultural and psychological effects of urbanisation at the turn of the twentieth century.

Writing Urban History for the Twentieth-Century City

Urban history is a field of history that examines the historical nature of cities and towns, and the process of urbanization. The approach is often multidisciplinary, crossing boundaries into fields like social history, architectural history, urban sociology, urban geography, business history, and archaeology. Urbanization and industrialization were popular themes for 20th-century historians, often tied to an implicit model of modernization, or the transformation of rural traditional societies.
