Contagious Communities: Medicine, Migration, and the NHS ...

Contagious Communities explores the relationship between national responses to medicine, migration and the National Health Service (NHS) between 1948 and 1991. The book’s thesis is clear: ‘the history of postcolonial migration in Britain is intricately linked to ideas and experiences of health and disease, and with the history of the NHS and public health in the postwar Welfare State’ (p ...

Contagious Communities: Medicine, Migration, and the NHS ...

Contagious Communities both broadens our understanding of the history of the NHS and brings the history of migration into our understanding of the development of medicine. It offers an exploration of three interconnected questions: the extent to which migration policies were shaped by medicine, the influence of post-colonial migration on British medical research and culture and the ways in which different groups of migrants were perceived in the context of medicine, health and disease.

Contagious Communities: Medicine, Migration, and the NHS ...

Yet the reciprocal impacts of post-war immigration and medicine in post-war Britain have yet to be explored. Contagious Communities casts new light on a period which is beginning to attract significant historical interest. Roberta Bivins draws attention to the importance - but also the limitations - of medical knowledge, approaches, and professionals in mediating post-war British responses to race, ethnicity, and the emergence of new and distinctive ethnic communities.
