A thermodynamic process is defined as a change from one equilibrium macrostate to another macrostate. Knowledge of thermodynamic processes is of the highest importance for engineers.

What is Thermodynamic Process - Definition

Thermodynamic processes are the conversion of one state to another state. If the value of the macroscopic property of the in a system at two different time are identical then the system is said to be in a same state at that time. Steady state condition of the system is achieved if none of its properties changes with respect to time.
