Santo (art) - Wikipedia

The homemade materials used by native New Mexican santeros, or "saint makers," provide one clue to the character of this local religious art. For the most part, santos (images of holy persons—God, Mary, angels, ordinary saints) were fashioned from available materials: cottonwood root for bultos (statues), and pine panels for retablos (paintings). The sacred artist covered the hand-shaped wood with gesso (gypsum and animal glue).

You'll need a car. Todos Santos is located about an hour and a half north from the Cabo International Airport. You can take a shuttle from the airport to your hotel, but I highly recommend renting a car. Since there are currently no cabs or Uber in the area, you'll need your own set of wheels if you want to explore.
