A remortgage valuation gives you an indication of your home's current market value. Once you start the remortgaging process, your lender will then do their own desk based or physical property valuation so that they can calculate your loan to value (LTV). The LTV ratio will then determine the mortgage rates available to you.

With no outstanding mortgage, you own 100% of the equity in your house. The mortgage deals available to you will depend on how much you want to borrow as a percentage of the current value of your property, which is known as the loan to value ratio (LTV). You will need to meet the criteria for the new mortgage.
