Crusader's engines aren't widely used for race boat engine conversions like its competitors engines are, probably because Crusader doesn't get involved with the racing crowd. But it is interesting to note that when its competitor's engines are used by the race engine builders, they always add stabilizers to the main bearing caps.

The Crusader was powered by a Pratt and Whitney J57 turbojet engine. The engine was equipped with an afterburner that, unlike on later engines, was either fully lit, or off (i.e. it did not have "zones"). The engine produced 18,000 lb of thrust at full power, enough to allow the F-8 to climb straight up in clean configuration.
