11/17/2011 04:46 pm ET Updated Jan 17, 2012. When the Tea Party was at its heyday during the 2010 elections, when the Palins and the Bachmanns ruled the day, we were treated to some soaring oratory by real, “take-our-country-back” Americans: You know, those real Americans, real patriots, real believers who belong to the party of core values, of family values — the good party, the party of God.

"Take Our Country Back": What Do They Mean? | HuffPost

Social Media is a vital tool for taking our country back. Because the media is no longer the trusted industry it once was considered to be, social media has become a very powerful platform for our President to reach us unfiltered. It may not always be polished and pretty, but transparency rarely is.
