Simply put, the purpose of a tax return is to make sure everybody has paid the right amount of tax. If you're not a PAYE taxpayer, you need to declare your last year's income and pay the right amount of income tax. However, tax returns also work in the opposite way. You can claim back the tax or VAT on certain business expenses. This applies to things like mileage allowances, specialist clothing or equipment, subscription to professional bodies, or household expenses if you work from home.
