This book argues that definite descriptions refer to or range over individuals, as claimed by Frege and Strawson. Working within a situation semantics framework, Elbourne maintains that definite descriptions combine with a situation variable in the syntax; at the semantic level, the whole expression is of type e and contains a locally free situation variable that can be either referential or bound by some higher operator.

Paul Elbourne This book argues that definite descriptions ('the table', 'the King of France') refer to individuals, as Gottlob Frege claimed. This apparently simple conclusion flies in the face of philosophical orthodoxy, which incorporates Bertrand Russell's theory that definite descriptions are devices of quantification.

Paul Elbourne presents the first fully-argued defence of the Fregean view. He builds an explicit fragment of English using a version of situation semantics. He uses intrinsic aspects of his system to account for the presupposition projection behaviour of definite descriptions, a range of modal properties, and the problem of incompleteness.

Definite Descriptions | Oxford University Press

Paul Elbourne defends the Fregean view that definite descriptions ('the table', 'the King of France') refer to individuals, and offers a new and radical account of the semantics of pronouns. He draws on a wide range of work, from Frege, Peano, and Russell to the latest findings in linguistics, philosophy of language, and psycholinguistics.
