The New Historians are a loosely defined group of Israeli historians who have challenged traditional versions of Israeli history, including Israel's role in the 1948 Palestinian exodus and Arab willingness to discuss peace. The term was coined in 1988 by Benny Morris, one of the leading New Historians. According to Ethan Bronner of The New York Times, the New Historians have sought to advance the peace process in the region. Much of the primary source material used by the group comes from Israel

“An” history is mainly a British usage, because the “h” is often not pronounced, as is the case with other words beginning with the same letter. So it would sound like “an ‘istory”. “An” is used before words beginning with a vowel, and pronouncing “history” like “istory” gives it the vowel sound at the beginning.

New historicism, a form of literary theory which aims to understand intellectual history through literature, and literature through its cultural context, follows the 1950s field of history of ideas and refers to itself as a form of "Cultural Poetics". It first developed in the 1980s, primarily through the work of the critic and University of California, Berkeley English professor Stephen Greenblatt, and gained widespread influence in the 1990s. Greenblatt coined the term new historicism when he
