UNLESS the church stops being defined as the building, the ministry of lay people will not flourish, a new report suggests. The report Kingdom Calling: The vocation, ministry, and discipleship of the whole people of God, published on Tuesday by the Faith and Order Commission, offers an in-depth examination of the part played by the laity, historically and in scripture, and asks why a succession of church reports over more than half a century have failed to correct the Church's leaning ...

The hidden ministry of the people needs to be brought into the light. In practice, the church rewards institutional activities and gives little attention to men's and women's daily ministry in their workplaces, in their homes and during times of recreation. Church-related ministries are known, recognized, supported, encouraged.

Two thirds of lay ministers agree that their earnings were adequate for their needs. (Lay Parish Ministers David DeLambo of the National Pastoral Life Center) A 2002 survey by the National Federation of Priests' Councils reported that average priest salaries ranged from $15,291 to $18,478 per year. In addition to a salary, diocesan priests receive a package of benefits that may include a car allowance, free room and board in the parish rectory, health insurance, and a retirement plan.

Lay Ecclesial Ministers in the Catholic Church | FutureChurch

The primary task of the group is to help draft a new pastoral plan for the archdiocese, but in early October we spent a Saturday morning discussing the present challenges of COVID, racial justice, divisiveness in our Church and society, and possible constructive ways to address them from our faith perspective.
