I have two Sony receivers, GX69ES and GX67ES, which have the same problem. There is intermittent noise in either one or both channels that does not vary with the volume control, and after the unit is on for a while the sound cuts out completely and there is a blinking red "P" on the display. I asked at a local repair shop and the guy says it might be a problem in the preamp stage and, if so ...

The function push buttons are reminiscent of the Nakamichi cassette decks. I don't own one of these units but I've heard that the chassis is actually made out of plated copper.
