FROM HUMAN TO POSTHUMAN CHRISTIAN THEOLOGY AND ...

The posthuman overcoming of human primacy, though, is not to be replaced with other types of primacies (such as the one of the machines). Posthumanism can be seen as a post-exclusivism. Posthumanism does not stand on a hierarchical system: there are no higher and lower degrees of alterity when formulating a posthuman standpoint; the non-human differences are as compelling as the human ones ...

What has Christian theology to do with posthuman culture? Much—or it should! Over a half-century ago C. S. Lewis warned that the last step in man’s conquest of nature would mean the conquest of human nature itself. Some people think the moment anticipated by Lewis has arrived. In How We Became Posthuman, Katherine Hayles makes just this case (though not in reference to Lewis).

The Revolt Against Human Nature - Christian Headlines

Christianity teaches that human beings were created good by a loving God. While being prone to sin and in need of grace, they are partners in accomplishing God's plan for existence.

Christianity - Human Nature and the Purpose of Existence

Here, in the transhumanist vision, the posthuman is one who has unambiguously surpassed the human by current standards, and the transhumanist is the one who advocates transhumanism, a worldview that affirms limits of human biology as something to surpass and is possible to be surpassed "through reason, science, and technology."

Is it possible to ethically engender posthuman persons?

How might those who care about human-ness grapple with the implications of a posthuman framework? While concern for human identity is certainly not restricted to those who profess belief in the Christian scriptures, those beliefs certainly have much to say about these ideas, and the implications should interest both Christians and those who are interested in humanist and posthumanist ideas ...

Posthumanism: A Christian Response - The Curator

In the posthuman, the distributed cognition of the human subject correlates with the distributed cognitive system as a whole in which "thinking" is done by both human and nonhuman actors. Hence, the liberal subject's ability to conceptualize oneself as autonomous being exercising one's will through individual agency and choice, gives way to distributed personhood where conscious agency is ...

A difficult but fundamental concept within Christianity, the Trinity is the belief that God is three separate persons but is still a single God.

BBC - Religions - Christianity: The Trinity

Posthuman or post-human is a concept originating in the fields of science fiction, futurology, contemporary art, and philosophy that literally means a person or entity that exists in a state beyond being human. The concept addresses questions of ethics and justice, language and trans-species communication, social systems, and the intellectual aspirations of interdisciplinarity.
