Higgs Hunters Guide

Higgs Hunters. Congratulations! Over 37,000 citizen scientists, from more than 170 countries, became part of the team to search for interesting features in LHC data. Over 1 million classifications were made, and both searches for new long-lived particles and weird events were successful. There were some surprising events - including observation of a "weird event" - a jet of muon particles in the ATLAS detector, which got the scientists very excited, and provoked a lot of head-scratching.
