A Song At Twilight Of

A Song at Twilight is a play in two acts by Noël Coward. It is one of a trio of plays collectively titled Suite in Three Keys, all of which are set in the same suite in a luxury hotel in Switzerland. The play depicts an elderly writer confronted by his former mistress with facts about his past life that he would prefer to forget. First produced in London in 1966, the play is one of Coward's last works for the stage.

One of Coward's later plays, A Song at Twilight is an amusing, but ultimately haunting focus on Hugo Latymer who has spent his whole life lying about who he really is. Giving too much away would spoil the play's denouement, but let's just say that Carlotta - with whom Hugo had an affair over 20 years ago - arrives at Hugo's hotel room, welcomed by his wife, with revelations about his sexual and emotional past that she threatens to reveal to the world.
