Use this feature when you have no time to make white balance adjustments. 1 If the camera is in auto mode, use the AUTO/MANUAL switch to switch to manual mode (on the viewfinder and LCD goes out). 2 Set the WHITE BAL switch to PRST. The current white balance value appears. • White balance values 3200 K and 5600 K are preset in the PRST position.

Setting a manual white balance, often called a custom white balance is way easier than most people could ever hope it to be. You'll want to shoot using custom white balance in any situation that you cannot control the light sources you are using. This will also be helpful in scenarios where there is more than one light source, and you have to use them both while photographing. Custom

The big question for me was how well the HVX200 would perform, especially in HD. For this subjective evaluation, I initially shot in full auto mode (auto focus, iris, white balance and gain control) using the factory default “normal” Scene File 1 at 1080i. All test shots were viewed on a 23-inch widescreen 1920×1200 LCD and a 42-inch HDTV ...

HVX200 White Balance made Simple First, a little background into what White Balance is: The human eye doesn't compensate for changes in color temperature, your brain does. When you move from outdoors to indoors your iris adjusts for the amount of light but your brain tricks you into thinking colors are the same. You actually have to learn to "see" color, which was one of the first things had ...

LumenosityReviews: HVX200*White Balance made Simple

Because auto white balance isn't perfect, cameras have white balance presets which will give you approximate white balance for typical lighting settings. If you're in an incandescent lighting situation, for example, you select the lightbulb icon from your list of presets, and your camera makes adjustments to compensate for what it knows is a warmer light temperature.
